- Jane Bary ’19 and Julia Gan ’20 were named to the Philadelphia Inquirer Academic All-Area team
- Seven players were named to the Centennial Conference Academic Honor Roll as the Fords were honored with the ITA’s All-Academic Team Award for the 15th straight season
Andrew Cohn, a two-time ITA National Assistant Coach of the Year, is in his second year with the Haverford College women’s tennis team. Making an immediate impact, Cohn led the Fords to just their second appearance in the Centennial Conference Championship match as the team finished the year with a 13-4 record.

Cohn took over the Haverford program after spending four seasons as an assistant coach at his alma mater, Pomona College, where he had the opportunity to serve as the interim head coach during the spring 2014 and 2015 seasons, along with the fall 2016 season.

As interim head coach in 2014, Cohn led the Sagehens to a No. 9 national ranking as his team collected a 17-8 record overall to reach the NCAA Division III Regional Finals. His guidance also helped a doubles pairing reach the semifinals of the NCAA Championships. Continuing that successful trend, Pomona improved its spot in the national rankings during each of the next three seasons.

Cohn was instrumental in recruiting back-to-back top-five nationally ranked recruiting classes during the next two seasons. In his second year as interim head coach, he led the Sagehens to a 15-7 mark with five first-year players in the lineup. His team finished No. 7 in the national rankings and earned another regional finals appearance.

During the 2016 and 2017 seasons, Pomona finished with respective 20-4 and 16-8 records to rank sixth in the ITA poll at the conclusion of both seasons. Those last two seasons featured a 2016 Division III ITA Indoor National Championship before the team finished as runner-up in 2017. In Cohn’s three years as interim head coach, seven players earned All-America status. His team also excelled in the classroom as the Sagehens earned the ITA All-Academic Team Award during each of his four seasons and had 18 student-athletes who were named ITA Scholar-Athletes.

Cohn got his start in coaching at the University of La Verne while he was also pursuing his master’s degree in business administration. In his two seasons there, La Verne achieved its first national ranking in school history and climbed as high as No. 14 in the team national rankings. Before coaching at his alma mater, Cohn was a four-year member of the Pomona-Pitzer men’s tennis team, helping the program climb to as high as No. 8 in the nation his senior year (2011), when he served as a team captain.

OUTDOOR COURTS

FACILITIES

“My tennis experience at Haverford has shaped my college life in a variety of positive ways and has helped me grow physically, mentally, and emotionally. It has also provided a sense of balance to my academic workload. However, I am most proud to be part of such a hardworking, honorable, and supportive team. They are constantly encouraging me to do my best and fight until the end of every match.”

—Clara Farrehi ’20

INDOOR COURTS
Donated by alumni and friends of the college in 1957, Alumni Field House provides extensive facilities for athletics and recreation. The 58,000 square-foot facility was resurfaced in 2008 to include four tennis courts and a 200-meter oval that comprise The Gary Lutnick Tennis & Track Center. The tennis surface, called Mondoten, is a multilayer system designed to optimize shock absorption and uniform speed of play.
