Unlike ever before, today's workplace has five generations working in it. While this adds to diversity, it also presents unique challenges with working relationships. This workshop follows up on the introductory Multigenerational seminar provided a while back. Here we’ll take a deeper look at how our own assumptions about age – our bias – can adversely impact our understandings of one another. And then we’ll look to leverage this self-awareness in pursuit of bridging gaps, “talking” and enhancing workplace cooperation.